

Hear From Toyota's Senior Director of Environmental Sustainability About The Company's Environmental Strategy

August 18, 2022

Image not found or type unknown

Replenishing the environment for future generations through the power of collaboration. This is the belief that drives sustainability practices at Toyota Motor North America (Toyota).

SAE Tomorrow Today will feature Kevin Butt, senior director of Environmental Sustainability at Toyota, to discuss the company's environmental strategy, including the importance of water conservation and its impact on the food supply.

With full responsibility for Toyota's Environmental Action Plan, Butt is passionate about educating employees and sharing the company's environmental know-how with suppliers, partners, and communities. As evidence of the company's commitment to sustainability, Toyota's North American manufacturing facilities totaled 713.8 million pounds of waste in 2020—and they recycled, reused or composted 93.2% of it.

To learn more about Toyota's environmental goals and listen to the full podcast, please visit here.